Getty Images Advertisement - Continue Reading Below Princess Charlotte stuck out her tongue. She couldn't resist getting a little cheeky on the ride to the church — even though her mom was right there in the backseat. Prince Harry once did the same exact thing. The groom himself got up to similar antics as a kid, as evidenced by this photograph taken in 1988. He and Prince Harry were on their way back from a visit with a newborn Princess Beatrice in Portland Hospital. Kate Middleton had them holding hands on the way into the church. Prince George didn't carry Meghan's veil. That honor went to Jessica Mulroney's twin boys Brian and John Mulroney. The 7-year-olds were the oldest page boys in the bridal party, and therefore perhaps a little more trustworthy with the big duty. They all walked down the aisle behind the bride. While American weddings usually send the flower girls and ring bearers down first, British ceremonies typically have them follow behind. Myka Meira of Beaumont Etiquette previously told GoodHousekeeping.com. Prince George held hands with the fourth page boy Jasper Dyer, while Princess Charlotte linked up with two other flower girls. Prince George and Princess Charlotte didn't leave with the other kids. The rest of the bridal party followed the couple back down the aisle, but the Cambridges hung back for a bit. They instead exited with their parents. Prince George and Princess Charlotte joined the rest of the royal family on the steps of St. George's Chapel for a group photo-op. But Prince George was feeling a little camera-shy. The little guy hid behind his dad for a bit, but Princess Charlotte was front and center soaking up all of the attention. These two definitely have distinct personalities! His outfit matched his dad and uncle's. All of the page boys wore a miniature version of the Blues and Royals frockcoat worn by the groom and his best man. Both the Duke of Cambridge and Prince Harry belonged to this cavalry regiment. Their uniforms were the real thing, but the kids received something slightly different. "The figured braiding has been scaled down for the Pages, as otherwise it would have gone above their shoulders," Kensington Palace revealed in a statement. "The Pages are not wearing hats or white waist belts for practical reasons." Each page had their initials embroidered in gold on their shoulder straps "as a special memento" as well. It's the first time he's worn pants in public too. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge have always dressed their son in shorts and knee socks per royal family tradition. Members of the British elite rarely dress young boys in trousers, but they clearly made an exception on Saturday. Princess Charlotte couldn't resist showing off her shoes. Each of the bridesmaids' white leather Aquazurra shoes were monogrammed with their initials and the wedding date. Meghan gave them to her attendants as a gift and "keepsake of the special day." She also had a case of the sniffles. ... And she may have used her Givenchy dress as a tissue. No one can fault a 3-year-old, but the toddler was caught holding the ivory silk radzimir up to her face. Fun fact: The dresses designed by Clare Waight Keller also all had pockets. Prince George cheesed it up in the official portrait. He may have looked a little timid at the wedding, but the future king was all smiles in this newly released pic. The royal wedding is quickly approaching, but the father of the groom clearly isn't sweating the details. Both Prince Charles and his wife, Camilla, Duchess of Cornwall, are on a tour of France and Greece this week. While visiting the flower market in Nice earlier today, Charles weighed in on the upcoming nuptials. When asked how he was feeling about his son Prince Harry's marriage to Meghan Markle, he reportedly said, "Obviously marvelous. I'm sure it will be a very special day for everybody." View full post on Twitter According to royal correspondent Richard Palmer, the Prince of Wales and his wife Camilla called Meghan "a great girl." View full post on Twitter! TV also reports that Camilla said she "can't wait" for May 19, and when asked about the birth of Prince Louis, she said, "It's all very exciting." She later added, "More to go too. A few more babies to go. Zara has got a baby coming." Charles and Camilla have both spent time with Louis in the weeks after his birth, and there's no doubt that Harry and Meghan's wedding will bring back happy memories for the couple as well. They tied the knot in Windsor back in 2011, though they had a civil ceremony at the town guild hall, followed by a blessing in St. George's Chapel. After their morning in France, Prince Charles and Camilla have already jetted off to Athens, where they will continue their tour by meeting with the President of Greece. Before his trip, Charles reportedly said, "Greece is in my blood," a reference to his father, Prince Philip's Greek heritage. They'll return home to the U.K. later this week, with plenty of time to prepare for the royal wedding. Prince William and Kate Middleton took yet another stealth family vacation to close out the summer, only this time, it was for one very special reason. Over the weekend, the royals, along with their three children, made their way to France for the wedding of Kate's brother, James Middleton, to his now wife, Alizee Thevenet. Pool/Max Mumby/Getty Images According to the Daily Mail, the wedding was an intimate family-only affair, after the duo had to postpone the wedding twice due to COVID-19. renan gicquel/Getty Images "Mr & Mrs Middleton," James Middleton shared on Instagram on Sunday following the nuptials. "Yesterday I married the love of my life surrounded by family, friends, and of course a few dogs in the beautiful village of Bormes-les-Mimosas. Words cannot describe how happy I am." As The Telegraph explained, the couple met in 2018 when Middleton's therapy dog Ella "made a beeline" for Thevenet, instead of a nearby water bowl, at a London sports club. "Rather embarrassed, I went over to apologize and bring Ella back," Middleton told The Telegraph in an interview earlier this year. "Little did I know, but I had just met my future wife, all thanks to Ella... If I hadn't trusted Ella, I wouldn't have brought her to the South Kensington Club and she wouldn't have been able to say hi to the woman who became my fiancée." (L-R) Michael Middleton, Carole Middleton, Prince Charles, The Prince of Wales with Camilla, Duchess of Cornwall and Eliza Lopes, Lady Louise Windsor, Grace van Cutsem, Prince William, Duke of Cambridge and Catherine, Duchess of Cambridge and Margarita Armstrong-Jones, page boys Tom Pettifer and William Lowther-Pinkerton with Queen Elizabeth II, Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, Pippa Middleton, Prince Harry and James Middleton greet well-wishers from the balcony at Buckingham Palace on April 29, 2011 in London, England. Peter Macdiarmid/Getty Images As for the Duke and Duchess, they will now return home, but not before the entire family completes mandatory COVID-19 testing. Daily Mail noted, because France is on the UK's amber list, Kate and William, along with George and Charlotte, must be tested on or before the second day after returning. Little Louis, who is under the age of five, is exempt. But, we'd call families getting to reunite for happy occasions again well-worth the swab Thanks for your feedback! Prince Harry and Meghan Markle officially tie the knot today, Saturday, May 19, and unless a gilded invitation recently appeared in your mailbox, the only way to watch the wedding of year live will come courtesy of TV networks and various live streams online. The royal ceremony at St. George's Chapel in Windsor Castle begins at noon London time — that's 7 a.m. ET or 4 a.m. PT — with coverage airing beforehand to capture all of the high-profile arrivals and lead-up. At 1 p.m., the couple will take a carriage ride around Windsor greeting well wishers before heading off to the first of two non-televized receptions. Here's how you can watch the royal wedding: Live Stream View full post on Facebook The CNN Facebook page is hosting a live stream of the event. You can also tune into CBSN, CBS's live stream, beginning at 4 a.m. ET and you don't need a cable subscription to watch. WATCH NOW CBS Gayle King and Kevin Frazier kick things off at 4 a.m. ET and a two-hour special, Royal Romance: The Marriage of Prince Harry and Meghan Markle, will air later that night at 8 p.m. ET/PT. NBC The Today Show has hosts Savannah Guthrie, Hoda Koth, Megyn Kelly, and Kathie Lee Gifford positioned at "a special vantage point" overlooking Windsor Castle for coverage beginning at 4:30 a.m. ET. ABC Good Morning America will start special coverage at 5 a.m. ET with co-anchor Robin Roberts and World News Tonight's David Muir. The network will also stream the five-hour broadcast online on ABCNews.com, GoodMorningAmerica.com, their mobile apps, and social platforms. Fox News Ainsley Earhardt will co-host FOX & Friends Weekend live from Windsor beginning at 5 a.m. ET, with Shepard Smith and Sandra Smith joining from outside of St. George's Chapel starting at 6 a.m. ET. TLCA live four-hour feed will kick off at 5 a.m. ET, followed by the premiere of TLC's Royal Wedding Revealed at 10 p.m. ET/9 p.m. CT. The hour-long special will feature commentary from Randy Fenoli, Lori Allen, and Monte Durham of Say Yes to the Dress as well as style experts George Kotsiopoulos and Hayley Paige. The panel will also offer Twitter commentary that will be shown on-air during the ceremony broadcast. View full post on Twitter If you're ready to say yes to Meghan's dress, follow Randy on Twitter and use #TLCRoyalWedding to get into the convo. HBO View full post on YouTube Unsuspecting viewers tuning into The Royal Wedding Live with Cord and Tish! on HBO may question their hosts' commentating skills, but look closer and you'll realize they're really Will Ferrell and Molly Shannon reprising their comedic personas from the Rose Bowl Parade. Their tongue-in-cheek parody fooled some Amazon customers back in January, but hopefully everyone gets in on the joke this time. The special airs live 7:30 a.m. ET/4:30 a.m. PT, but you can also catch it later that night at 9:45 p.m. ET/PT if you're looking for an undoubtedly hilarious recap of the festivities. BBC America Of course BBC is covering the royal wedding! You can either get the channel's broadcast on TV or via their live stream online for free through BBC World News. At a Movie Theater GET TICKETS! If you want to see the fascinator on the big screen, check showtimes at your local cinema. Nearly 200 U.S. theaters will show the royal wedding commercial-free on May 19 at 10 a.m. through a partnership between Fathom Events and BritBox, the subscription service from BBC Studios and ITV. Members of the press set up cameras on the media stand in the front of Westminster Abbey the day before the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge's wedding in 2011. Pawel Libera/Corbis/Getty Images All media outlets can broadcast the ceremony as part of a "pool camera," but not every royal wedding received the same treatment. Prince Edward and Sophie Rhys-Jones decided against broadcasting their 1999 nuptials, but many other family members have gone the more public route. Twenty-three million Americans alone watched the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge say "I do," and there's no forgetting the biggest wedding of the 20th century: Diana, Princess of Wales and Prince Charles.
